I'm going to church. Catahoula Chef Jan Birnbaum, a Louisiana native who trafficked in fancier food at San Francisco's Campton Place restaurant and New York's Quilted Giraffe, revisits his roots doing good-time fare here; that accounts for the lively at times loud scene inside this restaurant, and for some of the liveliest food I tasted anywhere in Napa.

Direct product Second Edition

If they were not Catholics, confession and absolution were not such simple matters for them, and as Gerald Strauss has shown, Protestants in the generations following Luther often had no real idea of the mechanics of justification by faith alone, freely given grace, and the whole edifice of theology that made auricular confession theoretically unnecessary among Lutherans.
